Monday, September 24,

Is, without any exception, taking all precedents into consideration, an entertainment of unusual merit. Its success in New York was only equaled by its TRIUMPHAL CAREER IN EUROPE,

Where it commanded the patronage of the most scientific, literary and artistic people. In the Em-pire City it was exhibited for TWO HUNDRED CONSECUTIVE NIGHTS At Barnum's Museum, New York, and for one hun-dred and eights one nights at Jayne's Hail, Phila-delphia; fifty nights at Maryland Institute, Balti-more, and nine weeks in Washington, attracting THOUSANDS OF PEOPLE,

Who, in conjunction with the press, pronounced it the latest wonder of the nineteenth century.

The management, anxious to conver a proper idea of the powerful features of this portrayal of SCENES AS THEY ARE IN THE ANIMATED WORLD, Boys leave to offer the following program

A correspondent recently visited Ralph Farnham, said to be the sole survivor of the Farnham, said to be the sole survivor of the battle of Bunker Hill. He resides at Acton, Maine, and was 104 years old on the 7th of July. The following report of the gentleman's conversation will entertain the reader. "I was working on the farm," commenced the old gentleman, "when the news came of the trouble with the British. A good many lads enlisted, and I felt like listing as well as the rest; but my mother didn't like to he if of my going away. However, she suspected something, and one day she see me cleaning my musket. 'Ralph, she says you ain't gone and 'listed?' 'Not just yet, mother,' I said. Still she was uneasy, and I see her go to a neighbor whose son had gone down to Boston to jine the son had gone down to Boston to jine the army. I followed her, and when I got to the house I heard her crying. I was sorry the house I heard her crying. I was sorry then, but it was too late.

"The next day I and lot of others were marched to line the army at Cambridge, Ginral Washington had just come to take command. On the road the people came out of their houses and cheered us, and at Andover, Colonel Abbott treated the officers, and sent us out some cider and grog in pails. We got to Cambridge, and the next day were marched to Charlestown, and the Battle of Bunker Hill was fought. Ah! that was a terrible, bloody fight! It was a shocking slaughter! Twas the first time I had ever seen a battle. After that I lought with the shughter! Twas the first time I had ever seen a battle. After that I lought with the army through three campaigns, from 1775 to 1777. I often saw Washington. He was a fine man. We don't see such fine men as Ginral Washington these days. And old Putnam! he was a rough old fellow, but brave as a lion; he cared for nobody nor nothing. And Gates—he was a brave man, toc, though he made no show.

"I was present at the surrender of Burgoyne. I was on gnard at the camp where goyne. I was on guard at the camp where Borgoyne and the other British officers d ned with Gates after the surrender. They were all very merry, for all they had been whipped. Gates sat at the head of the table, and there was some laughing done where Burgoyne was seated, and Gates wanted to know what it was about. Somebody said, Ginral Burgoyne says you look more like an old woman than a solder—Ginral. 'Do I'!' says Gates, laughing; Well, perhaps I do. I've deliv red Ginral Burgoyne of 10,000 thildren at any rate, and they all laughed heartily. Gates got the best of the Britishers.

After the war w: 8 over, I came and settled on this farm. It cost $2 an acre, and I had 100 acres. It was all a wilderness then—nothing but forest for miles around, and the woods were full of bears and other wild animals; the bears often molested me, and I animals; the bears often molested me, and I shot a good many. One day I was in the woods with nothing but my ax, when a bear dropped down from a tree close by; presently another came down, and then three cubs. I didn't like the looks of it, but after staring at me they all made off, and I let'em go. Once I killed a moose-deer close by my log hut. It weighed 600 pounds! I lived in the log hut by myself for four years, and then I got married, and after awhile built this house just above where the log-cabin stood I have had seven children; five of them are still living. Sxty years ago I joined the Free-Will Baptist, and I've been a member of the church ever since."

Thrilling Adventure with a Ruttle-snake-Desperate Struggle for Life with a Ser-

A young man, Frederick Smith, employed as teamster upon a farm near the town of Bourbon, Mo., made a most miraculous es-Bourbon, Mo., made a most miraculous escape, a few days since, from a horrible death. He was engaged in putting wood upon his wagon, when a rattle-snake of the largest dimensions, sprang from its hiding-place under the pile of wood, and proceeded to coil its slimy body about his arm. The young man grew deadly sick at the touch and sight, and would probably have given away under the shock, but for the words of encouragement that came just at the critical moment, from a companion near by. Smith became instantly inspired with new hopes. Following the suggestion of his companion.

became instantly inspired with new hopes. Following the suggestion of his companion, he seized the head of the hissing reptile in a manner that prevented it from using its fangs, and held it off firmly from the arm.

The description given us of the appearance of the young man, at this time, is most thrilling. The deathly paleness at first observed in his features had disappeared, to give place to flushed cheeks and wild, determined eyes. His hold upon the monster was that of a giant. Finally, the snake, feeling that it was about cetting the worst of the that of a giant. Finally, the snake, feeling that it was about getting the worst of the battle, increased the pressure of its folds upon the arm. This change of tactics caused great pain, though it did not induce young Smith to slacken his hold upon the head. It was the struggle for life, and to have loosened the grasp upon the snake's head would have unquestionably resulted in death.

The young rear therefore held on fixely

The young man, therefore, held on firmly, until his companion came to the rescue and aided in unfolding the snake from the arm. After being released, a reaction followed the intense excitement under which Smith had labored, causing him to fall with exhaustion.

The reptile was soon dispatched, when it was found that he measured four feet and three inches in length, and carried thirty-three

EXECUTION OF A NEGRO POISONER .- The negro woman, Frances, slave of Jacob Swig-ert, who was convisted and sentenced to be ert, who was convicted and sentenced to be hung at the last term of the Franklin County (Ky.) Circuit Court, for an attempt to poison the family of Hiram Berry, at Frankfort, on Friday suffered the extreme penalty, at twelve o'clock, on a gallows erected near the Versailles pike, about a mile from town. There were several hundred persons, male and female, present, of whom a considerable portion were boys and negroes. She died without struggling—her neck probably being broken at once, as the cart was driven from under her. This is the only case of banging that has occurred at Frankfort for a period of over twenty-live years. period of over twenty-five years.

ANOTHER "PLOT" DISCOVERED IN TEXAS .--The Colorado Citizen, of the 5th inst., says: Last week a plot was discovered in the neighborhood of Lyons, in the lower part of Fayette County; among the negroes, to organize themselves in a body of about 200, go to meet another band at LaGrange, and thence proceed to Mexics. The leader has been arrested.

A HUGE STORY—A Quadruple Calf.—A correspondent writes from Akron, in this State, that a most singular calf was born there last week. It had four heads, sixteen legs and four tails—in fact, four complete calves united in one. It is very large of its age, and of a spotted brown and white color. It is a beautiful color, and everyone regards it with admiration.

A TEUVON IN A PREDICAMENT.-A German thus describes an accident:

Washington, September 18.—A question having been raised that the guarantee, under the recent proposals, should be equal to the cost of constructing the Pacific Telegraph line, the Cabinet, to-day, it is said, decided that there was no executive discretion, as the law provides that no contract shall be made till the line is in actual operation, and the fulfillment of which is guaranteed, as in the case of bids for mail contracts; also, if such shall be accepted under that specific con-We think the scene was in Switzer-land; lut the mountain, though high enough to tax his stout heart to the utmost, must have been among the lowest. Let us fancy it a good, lofty hill, in the summer time. It was, at any rate, so high that the father of the lady, a proud nobleman, thought it im-possible for a young man, so burdened, to scale it. For this reason alone, in scorn he bade him do it, and his daughter should be ficially announced to-morrow.

The peasantry assembled in the valley to witness so extraordinary a sight. They measured the moustain with their eyes; they communed with one another and shook their heads, but all admired the young man; and some of his fellows, looking at their mistresses, thought they could do as much. The young man, (the son of a small land proprietor, who had some pretensions to wealth, though none to nobility), stood respectfully looking, but confident; rejoicing in his heart that he should win a mistress, though at the cost of a noble pain, which he could herdly tenk of as a pain, considering wie it was he was to carry. The lady stood by the side of her father, pale, desirous, and dreading. She thought her lover would succeed, but only because her lover would succeed, but only because she thought him in every respect the noblest of his sex, and that nothing was too much for his strength and valor. Great fears came over her nevertheless, She knew not what night happen in the chances common to all. She felt the bitterness of being herself the burden to him and the task; she dared not look at her fither nor the mountain. She look at her father nor the mountain. She fixed her eyes on the crowd (which, nevertheless, she beheld not), and now, on her hand and her finger's end, which she doubled up toward her with a pretense—the only de-daughor or mothers pped out of the crowd, and coming up to her, notwithstanding their frame of the Friend Farm, bissed the hand which she knew not what to do with. The father and, "Now, sir, puranend to this nummery." The lover turned pale for the first time and took up the lady. The spectators re-joice to see the manner in which he moved off, slow but secure, as if encouraging his mistress. They mount the hill; they proceed well; he halts an instant before he gets midway, and seems to refuse something; then he ascends at a quicker rate, and now, being at the midway point, shifts the lady from one aide to the other. The spectators give a great shout. The Baron, with an air of indifference, bites the tip of his gauntlet, and then casts on them the air of rebuke. At the shout the lover resumed his way. Slow, but not feeble in his step, yet it grows slower. He stops again, and they think they see the lady kiss him on the forehead. The women begin to tremble, but the men say he will be victorious. He resumes again; he is half-way between the middle and the top; he way, and seems to refuse something; then half-way between the middle and the top; he rushes, he stops, he staggers, but does not fall; another shout from the men, and he resumes once more; two-thirds of the remain-ing part of the way are conquered. They are certain the lady kisses his forenead and The women burst into tears, and the stoutest men look pale. He ascended slower than ever, but seems to be more sure; he halts, but it is only to plant his foot to go on again, and thus he picks his way, planting his foot at every step, and then gaining ground with an effort. The lady litts up her arms as if to lighten him; he stops, he struggles, and noves sideways, taking very little steps, and bringing one foot every time close to the other. Now he is all but on the top; he haits again, he is fixed he storgers a gross good again, he is fixed, he staggers, a groan goes through the multitude; suddenly he turns full from toward the top; it is luckily almost level; he staggers, but it is forward. Yes, every limb in the multitude makes a movement as if to assist him; see, at last he is on the top, and down he falls with his burden. An enormous shout—he has won! he has

An enormous shout—he has won! he has won! Now he has a right to caress his mistress, and she is caressing him, for neither of them get up. If he has fainted, it is with joy, and in her arms.

The Baron puts spurs to his horse, the crowd following him; half way up he is obliged to dismount; they accend the hill together, the crowd silent and happy, the Baron ready to burst with shame and impatience. They reach the top; the levers are face to face on the ground, the lady clasping him with both arms, his lying on each side, "Traitor!" exclaimed the Baron, "thou hast practic of this feat before, on purpose to hast practic d this feat before, on purpose to deceive me Arise! "You can not expect it, sir," sald a worthy man who was rich enough to speak his mind; "Sampson himself might take his rest after ch a deed i"

Part them!" said the Baron.

Several persons went up, not to part them, but to congratulate and keep them together. These people look close; they kneel down and bend an ear, they bury their faces on them. "God forbid they should ever be parted more," said a venerable man, "they can never be." He turned his old face treeming with tears and leading the streaming with tears. streaming with tears, and looked at Baron: "Sir, they are dead!" LATER AND INTERESTING FROM SYRIA .- We have intelligence from Syria as Lite as the lish of August, of a very interesting tenor. The Jaffa outrage has been settle as follows: The Turkish Government gives £500 to the widow of the murdered man, and the four persons now in prison here to be sent to Constantinople and condemned to imprisonment for life, and, should there ever be found evidence to convict them of the murder that they be executed, and that the fifth man be they be executed, and that the fifth man be still sought after.

Some 4,000 refugees had arrived from Damascus, principally women and children, looking wretchedly. Troops had been sent to Hasbeiya to bring all the Christians from that region, as the Drusses are murdering the Christians with impanity. The French mall steamer arrived on the morning of the 16th, with 450 French troops. Two other steamers were also in port, with about 2,000 troops. The Dutch Admiral arrived the same morning in a frigute.

THE AUTHORSHIP OF A FAMILIAR COUPLEY. Every body has heard the lines:

"No pent-up Utica contracts our pawers, But the whole boundless continent is ours, but very few people know the author, or in what poem they occur. They were written by one Jonathan Mitchell Sewell, a Portsmouth poet, as an epilogue to Addison's play of Cuto, on the occasion of its performance by an amateur company in that place, in 1778.

Harronn, Conn., September 19.—In the Circuit Court of the United States here today, before Judges Nelson and Shipman, in the case of Bank of Norwalk st. Adams's Express Company, the jury found a verdict for the defendants. The action was to recover $2,971 sant by the Bank to the Express on the discount of a forged note sent to the bank through the Express. The Court held that an Express Company is an insurer or guarantee of the genuineness of paper sent through it, and has the right to deliver the avails of a note to the party from whom it receives the note, even though the bank sending the avails supposes it is sending them to some one else.
